Trainers

- General information
- Educational supervisors
- Start Using NHS Medical Careers
- Career Planning introduction
- Tips for helping trainees
- Sample Scenarios
- Specialist Careers Advice
- Guidelines for MBTI Assessors
- Health Education South West (formerly SW Peninsula Deanery) & AGCAS DVD Notes
- Interactive Medical Careers Map
- Sci59
- Generation Y
- Training in providing careers advice
- Group workshop plans
- Research papers
- Tips for establishing an undergraduate careers service
- Posters and promotional materials
- Website evaluation 2010
- Website evaluation 2012
- Moodle resource

My Links

Manage my Links

Training in providing careers advice

PG Cert/Dip/MA in Managing Medical Careers

Health Education KSS runs, through its partnership with the University of Brighton a PG Certificate / PG Diploma / MA in Managing Medical Careers.

These courses are designed to offer participants an opportunity to become more proficient in the provision of career support to medical students and junior doctors.

These courses are unique, and the PG Cert has been running since January 2008. The PG Cert is currently recruiting students for a January start date.

London Local Education and Training Board (LETB) e-learning module

The London LETB has produced an excellent e-learning module for educational supervisors wishing to study more about providing careers support to their trainees.

The module is based on the four-stage career planning model, and will take participants through the following modules:

- A framework for career planning
- Stage 1: Helping the trainee with self-assessment
- Stage 2: Helping the trainee with career exploration
- Stage 3: Helping your trainee with career decision making
- Stage 4: Helping your trainee with planning implementation
- A structure for a careers support session
- Supporting the trainee with unrealistic career plans

The e-learning module is freely available and can be downloaded from the London LETB website.

Copyright Health Education KSS 2013